It's hard to imagine the United States of America having anything other than the great and magnificent bald eagle as its official bird, especially if it's up against a silly looking turkey! Surprisingly, Benjamin Franklin was the one who actually disagreed with the idea of naming the bald eagle the official bird of the U.S. In a letter to his daughter a year after the Great Seal was chosen by Congress and had the bald eagle as its centerpiece, Ben Franklin wrote, "I wish the bald eagle had not been chosen as the representative of our country; he is a bird of bad moral character...For the truth the turkey is in comparison a much more respectable bird, and withal a true original Native of America." It seems he believed the turkey would've been a better and more respectable representation of their country.
